

CHRISTINA holds the book up and smiles devilishly.

JENNY

Christina...you said we were just going for walk, that we'd have a picnic. I wanted to stay home and make shrinky-dinks, but you said--

CHRISTINA

Jenny, we took a walk. And we will have a picnic. Calm down. I wouldn't lie to you.

JENNY

Then why do you have some evil book and a bag of pumpkins?

CHRISTINA

I told you. Name change.

JENNY

Who exactly are you planning on becoming?

CHRISTINA

I was thinking I liked the sound of Georgina.

JENNY

Georgina? I mean. It's ok.

CHRISTINA

Georgina the Teen Witch.

JENNY

The what?

CHRISTINA

Has a nice ring to it.

JENNY

It's like, a bit derivative, but—

CHRISTINA

Help me get this set up.

She begins to arrange the pumpkins in a pentagram.

JENNY

Couldn't you have just asked people to start calling you Georgina?

CHRISTINA

No, because that's dumb and no one would do it. I need it to stick.

JENNY

Ok, but...Why pumpkins?

CHRISTINA

(Holding up the book)

I don't make the rules.

JENNY

Ok, well, did the pumpkins have to be this big? You couldn't have gotten like those baby table top pumpkins they always sell at the registers at Meijer?

CHRISTINA

Do you think this is a joke?

JENNY

I honestly don't know what I think.

They work in silence. They finish.
